At the end of August 2019, IOM estimates that 4,350,150 Iraqis have returned to their area of origin. This is an increase of 45,012 people since the end of June 2019.

While overall this shows positive trends, as of 31 August 2019 there are still 1,552,914 IDPs.

I can’t tell you how much I love this job. I feel proud to be working on this project in my town, and when it finishes, I will feel a great sense of achievement.

“Our job is to guard this bridge. Families need it to access critical services like healthcare and education; it’s a vital connector. At the moment they use a small boat to get from one side to the other. But once the bridge has finished, people’s lives will be much easier.”

“My husband was arrested by ISIL three years ago and I have not seen him since. I accepted the work because I needed the money. It wasn’t too difficult, and the most important thing is that we earned an income. I also enjoyed working with other women.”

“My name means ‘good news.’ When we used to hear bombs going off, I would talk calmly to my students and try to make them feel safe. Now things are back to normal. We have water, electricity and food, and the children are excited to learn.”
